

Anniversary Magazine

HH Apartment

Alex Lesage
08.03.2022

Home to a young family of three, the architectural qualities of this apartment provided the perfect opportunity to amplify its spatial attributes. Surrounded by lush greenery at the top of a serene hill, the unit’s open-plan is conceptualized like an en-suite lounge conducive to intimate conversations.

Anchored at the heart of the space is the wooden portal, an identifying feature of the studio. The high ceilings are further accentuated within the same portal through greenery underneath a skylight. The movable pivot screens allowed the flexibility to isolate the inner room, granting privacy for respective users.

Walls are preserved to exhibit a series of art pieces collected by the clients over their years of travelling. The resultant design achieves an understated mood that blends seamlessly, creating a distinctly subtle residence without the interruption from the outside world.

Full article – www.anniversary-magazine.com/all/2022/2/28/holland-hill-residence-by-right-angle-studio