This sophisticated apartment in Singapore by Right Angle Studio has been designed to encapsulate life in cosmopolitan New York City, where even its scent has been specially curated: “The client wanted a haven where he could return to and relax comfortably,” says Jay Liu, art director of Right Angle Studio. “The interiors are largely inspired by hotels in New York City, extending to the material palette and even the fragrance.”

To this end, large swathes of black timber cabinetry and dark hardwood floors are paired with deep grey furnishings and wall fabrics. The kitchen has been specifically designed for the owner who takes great pleasure in cooking and entertaining. Here, the full-length kitchen in black timber and deep grey stone is both a feature and minimal expanse.
