

Rooted in Nature: This Singapore Apartment Celebrates the Beauty of Imperfection

SARAH MORAN

Home Journal

Gēn Apartment

Sarah Moran
17.07.2024

In a world where sleek lines and polished surfaces often reign supreme, Gen Apartment, designed by Right Angle Studio, is a breath of fresh air that pays homage to the raw, unbridled beauty of the natural world.

Conceived as a bespoke haven for a young couple in Singapore, this stunning abode is a masterclass in biophilic design, where the genesis of materials takes center stage. As one enters this expansive, airy space, the warmth of wooden panelling envelops, setting the tone for a journey that celebrates the imperfections of nature. The open layout, cleverly reconfigured to revolve around the couple's lifestyle, unfolds like a canvas, seamlessly merging living, dining, and reading areas into a harmonious whole.

In the seating area, a custom-designed sofa takes pride of place, eschewing the traditional television for a more convivial atmosphere. Nestled into a snug pocket space, this bespoke arrangement encourages conversation and connection, its tailored proportions imbuing the space with a sense of intimacy.

Full article – www.homejournal.com/en/homes/Rooted-in-Nature:-This-Singapore-Apartment-Celebrates-the-Beauty-of-Imperfection/6626