Based in bustling Singapore, Right Angle Studio has built a reputation as an award-winning interior design firm that creates spaces that are both timeless and captivating. Since its inception, the firm has completed projects ranging from residential to commercial spaces, with each design infused with a unique blend of creativity and precision. The studio's services include interior consultancy, design direction, space planning and interior decoration, and their work could already enjoy global recognition.

One of their most recent and striking projects, titled 'Resting Rights', illustrates their ability to come up with innovative solutions to contemporary challenges. In a world where Singaporeans suffer from one of the highest rates of sleep deprivation in the world, Right Angle Studio felt the need to create a space that promotes restorative sleep. According to a recent report, Singapore ranks third out of 43 cities when it comes to sleep deprivation, highlighting the urgency of this project.

'Resting Rights' is a space of just 10.64 square metres, in which the studio has transcended the limitations of available resources to create an oasis of calm and rejuvenation.
