

LOOKBOX LIVING

Understated Luxury in a Zen-Like Apartment

VANITHA PAVAPATHI

Lookbox Living

Tea Room

Vanitha Pavapathi
10.06.2019

Tailored as a private enclave in the heart of the city, this apartment seeks to achieve a sense of understated opulence through a luxurious mix of textures and materials.

Beauty is subjective. Yet this home undoubtedly appeals to many. Perhaps it's because of its restrained colour palette, its minimal furnishings or its purposeful negative space. Regardless, it conjures a sense of calm and understated opulence that make it impossible to pin down a deciding factor.

Engaged by a young executive couple who have the penchant for travelling and appreciation for nature, Alex Liu and Jay Liu of Right Angle Studio explain that the apartment has been tailored as a private enclave in the heart of the city, much like a home away from home.

The bonsai feature anchored within a minimalist wall pocket also beautifully captures this clever interplay between open and closed spaces, while maintaining the balance between tranquillity and luxury.

Full article – www.lookboxliving.com.sg/homes/understated-luxury-zen-apartment