Set within the industrial shell of Singapore's Tan Boon Liat Building, the CANCAN flagship showroom by Right Angle Studio approaches retail as an atmosphere to inhabit.

Named after a colloquial expression that suggests everything is possible, the boutique translates that everyday optimism into an interior defined by generosity, calm, and spatial clarity.

The plan is organised as a series of fluid, pocketed zones, each tuned to a different pace of use. Boundaries stay intentionally porous, creating gentle visual connections between areas while supporting smooth movement across the space. Circulation and adjacency are carefully composed to invite pauses, informal gatherings, and moments of lingering, so the showroom is experienced as a lived environment, not a static display.
