Tucked within the Tan Boon Liat Building, where floors are filled with decades of furniture trade and industrial touches, CANCAN Flagship settles in with a different kind of presence. The showroom doesn't attempt to separate itself from the building's character. It strips things back, holding onto what essentials, and lets the rest slowly fade.

Designed by Right Angle Studio, the design story of CANCAN began with reiterating the idea of a multipurpose boutique cafe beyond its functional purposes. As one enters the store, they will walk through a narrow, tunnel-like passage wrapped in a lower ceiling and intimate lights, then in such a brief moment, the space opens to a spacious and light-filled living space, like one thoughtful surprise.
